

Create a human support service directory.

More than a list of contact numbers, this service directory goes further by including details such as a name and photo of the person with whom a farmer would be in direct contact.

Making contact

Make a list of local mental health service providers.

Contact the provider and request these things:

- Name/s and photo/s of people who deal directly with farmers.
- A short personal story about their experience of living in the area.
- Their understanding and experiences of farming.
- How they can help farmers.
- Their contact details (phone and email).
- Logo and website address of the mental health service provider.

Design a directory

Now that you have content based on the list above, commit the information from the service providers and design a directory.

A directory in this case will be multiple sheets bound together, with a magnetised strip on the back.

Suggest to find a local designer to help or copy our Yorke Peninsula example.

Make it so the directory can be magnetised to the fridge door.
